

Synoptek Acquires IT Services Company

Synoptek Complements Rapid Organic Growth through Acquisition

SANTA ANA, CA, December 7, 2007 -- Synoptek, a rapidly growing outsourced IT firm, acquired IT services firm Texum, Inc. of Newport Beach, CA. Synoptek announced that the deal was signed on December 6, 2007 and the operations of the two companies will be immediately integrated.

The merger significantly expands Synoptek's Orange County customer base and the additional Texum resources will complement Synoptek's current IT outsourcing capability. Synoptek delivers complete or partial IT outsourcing for customers that require superior service levels.

"Technology innovation, IT operations, limited availability of skilled resources and increased dependence on IT are driving consolidation of IT service providers in the mid-market space," states Tim Britt, Synoptek CEO. The recent proliferation of virtualization technology is one of the technology innovations that enable us to deliver enterprise-level services at an overall lower cost. Virtualization and other technologies enable us to provide flexible processing capacity across a large shared infrastructure for our mid-market clients. Typically, these companies do not have the internal resources or capacity to invest the capital required for these capabilities.

Synoptek was recognized as Orange County's 9th fastest growing, privately-held company in 2007 by The Orange County Business Journal. "Our rapid growth illustrates that there is a significant need for high quality and cost-effective IT Outsourcing services," states Britt. "Synoptek focuses on getting things done and delivering superior support services. "This enables us to beat out our primary competitors," claims Britt. "By acquiring companies, we are able to leverage our operational excellence, leverage our IT infrastructure and diversify our depth of expertise to serve customers better. We will continue to expand both organically and through acquisition," states Britt.

Terms of the merger were not disclosed. The deal officially closed December 6th. Tim Britt will continue to serve as the CEO of Synoptek. Asem Abusir, the current CEO of Texum, will assume responsibilities for Synoptek's IT Infrastructure professional services practice.
